A Changed View of a Changed Man.

~~I am completely discouraged, after trying so called specialists and different advertised remedies, I feel that I am getting worse instead of better and have about given up hope of ever being cured of my kidney trouble.~~

I have changed my mind, for, after reading of the positive guarantee of Foley's Kidney Cure, as a forlorn hope I tried a bottle, and the result was so favorable that I continued its use until I had taken three bottles which effected a thorough cure, and I am a changed man.

Why H. S. Stout Succeeds.

Here are a few reasons why H. S. Stout has succeeded in building up the largest tailoring business in Paris:

FIRST—He recognized the fact that five years ago that the only day of big profits and small sales was past.

SECOND—He cuts the price of tailor-made garments at least 40 PER CENT.

THIRD—He kept up the quality of his materials, his styles and his workmanship.

FOURTH—He always does as he advertised.

AS A RESULT.

As a result of this system he has built up a large trade that appreciates the fact that they save twenty dollars on a single Suit or Overcoat. "Many customers at a small profit rather than a few customers at a big profit," says H. S. Stout.

If you want credit, your high-price tailor gladly extends it, for he makes you pay dearly for it in the end.

Why not turn over a new leaf—wear the best, save money, by giving H. S. Stout a trial?

He makes the Finest Imported Suits for

$30.00 AND $35.00.

Oh, the Pain of Rheumatism!

Rheumatism often causes the most intense suffering. Many have for years vainly sought relief from this disabling disease, and are to-day worse off than ever. Rheumatism is a blood disease, and Swift's Specific is the only cure, because it is the only remedy which can reach such deep-seated diseases.

A few years ago I was taken with inflammatory Rheumatism, which became so intense that I was for weeks unable to walk. I tried several prominent physicians and took their treatment faithfully, but was unable to get the slightest relief. In fact, my condition seemed to grow worse, the disease spread over my entire body, and from November to March I suffered agony. I tried many patent medicines, but none relieved me. Upon the advice of a friend I decided to try S. S. S. Before allowing me to take it, however, a guardian, who was a chemist, analyzed the remedy, and pronounced it free of notash or mercury. I felt so much better after taking two bottles, that I continued the remedy, and in six months I was cured completely. The cure was permanent, for I have never since had a touch of Rheumatism though many times exposed to damp and cold weather.

ELEANOR M. TIPPETT, 3111 Powelson Avenue, Philadelphia.

Don't suffer long with Rheumatism. Throw aside your oils and liniments, as they can not reach your trouble. Don't experiment with doctors—their potash and mercury will add to your disability and completely destroy your digestion.

S. S. S. For The Blood

will cure perfectly and permanently. It is guaranteed purely vegetable, and contains no potash, mercury, or other mineral. Books mailed free by Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.

Late News of the War.

Troops by the thousands have sailed for Cuba and the army will play an important part in the capture of Santiago. Germany will observe the strictest sort of neutrality.

The Oregon and the New York have been sent to join Schley. A collier and another cruiser have also been sent to join his fleet.

Spain claims that there is only one warship in the Santiago harbor.

A cable from Madrid says that the Queen has asked the Spanish minister to France to request the Powers to intervene to obtain peace.

At 4:45 p. m. yesterday the New York World's Port Au Prince special said: The American fleet has again attacked Santiago, and that 3,000 insurgents are attacking the city on the land side. Senator Cannon estimates that the war will cost $600,000,000.

Just now, the Bluegrass region, with its green fields, sweet girl graduates, strawberries and roses, is the loveliest spot on the globe.

The Carlisle Mercury is welcomed into the semi-weekly fold of Kentucky newspaperdom. It shows much improvement and deserves its success.

Notes From Military Camps.

Dr. Ben Frank, of Paris has been appointed Sanitary Physician at Camp Bradley.

Camp Collier is now deserted, the Third Regiment having been moved to Chickamauga. The regiment was hauled on three trains.

Di-patches from Chickamauga tell an exciting story of an attempt made by some members of the Second Regiment, Kentucky, to hang a negro soldier from Maine. The negro used the vilest of epithets when ordered by a sentry not to cross the lines. Some of the mountain boys had a rope around the fellow's neck and over a convenient limb when Col. Gaither stopped the proceeding. The negro then blackguarded Col. Gaither, and several men covered the man with pistols, but Col. Gaither again saved the fellow's life. He was then arrested together with two white soldiers who supported him. They will be tried for mutiny, which may be punished by death.

Maj. W. C. Owens has been made a member of the Field Marshal Court by Gen. Compton.

The First Regiment is being mustered at Camp Bradley and may be moved from Lexington in a few days.

The boys of the Second have found some valuable relics on the famous battlefield at Chickamauga.

SHE WON BEAUTIFULLY.

It Cost Him the Better Part of a Cigar to Learn Politeness.

They boarded an east bound Market street car at Forty-first street. It was after 1 o'clock in the morning, and he wanted to smoke, having probably just dined or supped at a ball which was being given in the neighborhood. She didn't want to smoke and she didn't want to be separated from him.

"Come on inside the car," she pleaded.

"No," he answered. "I am going to smoke. Go inside yourself, and when I have finished my cigar I will join you." But this didn't suit her.

"If you stay out here to smoke," she retorted, "I'll stay right with you."

He looked at her a moment, and then evidently concluded that she was bluffing. Pulling out a big cigar, he lighted it, and, settling himself comfortably against the dashboard of the car, he began to pull away as if his life depended upon it. Nothing daunted, she took a place alongside of him and calmly folding her arms started up a lively conversation.

The spectacle was an odd one, and attracted the attention of every passenger in the car as well as of those who got on at various corners. He tried to urge her inside the car a number of times, but she refused to go. In this fashion the two rode across the bridge and half way to city hall before he weakened. The anticipated jeers of the people he knew would be on Market street in the center of the city were too much for him, and, throwing away the biggest end of his cigar, he sullenly said, "Well, if you won't go inside without me I suppose I'll have to trot along." Then he took a seat away up in the front end, and she settled herself beside him. Meanwhile the whole car smiled audibly.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

WHAT IT COSTS TO SMOKE.

A Library Which Materialized From Tobacco Five Cent Cigars.

"How can you afford all these books?" asked a young man, calling upon a friend. "I can't seem to find spare change for even the leading magazines."

"Oh, that library is only my 'one cigar a day,'" was the reply.

"What do you mean," inquired the visitor.

"Mean? Just this: When you advised me to indulge in an occasional cigar several years ago, I had been reading about a young fellow who bought books with money that others would have burned in cigars, and I thought I would try to do the same. You may remember that I said I should allow myself one cigar a day?"

"Yes, I recall the conversation, but don't quite see the connection."

"Well, I never smoked, but I put by the price of a 5 cent cigar every day, and as the money accumulated I bought books—the very books you see."

"You don't mean to say that your books cost no more than that! Why, there are dollars' worth of them."

"Yes, I know there are. I had six years' use of my apprenticeship to serve when you advised me 'to be a man.' I put by the money, which, at 5 cents a day, amounted to $18.25 a year, or $109.50 in six years. I keep those books by themselves as a result of my apprenticeship cigar money, and if you'd done as I did you would by this time have saved many, many more dollars than I have and would have been better off in health and self respect besides."—Success.

The Alpine Good Night.

Among the lofty mountains and elevated valleys of Switzerland the Alpine horn has another use besides that of sounding the far famed "Ranz des Vaches," or cow song, and this is of a very solemn and impressive nature.

When the sun has set in the valley and the snowy summits of the mountains gleam with golden light, the herdsman who dwells upon the highest habitable spot takes his horn and pronounces clearly and loudly through it, as through a speaking trumpet, "Praise the Lord God." As soon as the sound is heard by the neighboring herdsmen they issue from their huts, take their Alpine horns and repeat the same words.

This frequently lasts a quarter of an hour, and the call resounds from all the mountains and rocky cliffs around. When silence again reigns, the herdsmen kneel and pray with uncovered heads. Meantime it has become quite dark. "Good night!" at last calls the highest herdsman through his horn. The words resound from all the mountains, the horns of the herdsmen and the cliffs, and the mountaineers then retire to their dwellings.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Thrifty George Curzon.

The Hon. George Curzon, who married beautiful Miss Leiter, is decidedly canny. He recently rented a country mansion furnished, but without the family plate, and so was compelled to provide candlesticks for the house. He tried to exact from the landlord's agent a pledge that at the expiration of the lease he would take these candlesticks off his hands at two-thirds of what they cost. The agent demurred at first, but when he discovered that they were 15 in number, of japanned tin and cost 40 cents each, he solemnly agreed to pay $4 for the lot when Curzon leaves.

Maternal Trials.

"Edie," cried the mother from the hall below, "what's all that noise up stairs? It's shocking."

"Oh, it's these two dolls of mine, mamma. I'm going to put them right to bed and see if we can't have a little peace."—Detroit Free Press.

Wheat Injured By Rain.

[Lexington Gazette.]

Mr. John B. Kennedy of Bourbon, one of the best and most successful farmers of his county was in our office on Monday morning and said that the wheat was injured fully 25 per cent by the excessive rains of the last few days. He said that the wheat was just now in bloom and that the hard rain had washed off the pollen which was necessary to fructify the plant and produce the berry. We hope that he is mistaken but as he is an observant farmer and nearly as old as we are, tho' not quite, he may have seen the present meteoric conditions before and noted the result.

Bowling Party To-Night.

THE Dewey Bowling Club will give a bowling party to-night at Parks & Ritchie's alley. Positively no one will be admitted except the club and its young lady guests.

W. S. Hall holds the record of the alley. He made a score of 190 Tuesday night. H. J. Santon made a score of 167 this week, and other bowlers have made good scores. The popularity of the sport is increasing.

Dr. Purnell Joins The Army.

DR. JULIUS PURNELL, of this city, who has been attending medical college in Louisville received his diploma last week, and secured an appointment on the hospital corps of the Military Hospital at Fort Thomas. He left Wednesday for Fort Thomas to assume his duties. His many friends in Bourbon and Louisville will be glad to learn of his appointment.

More Cavalry Horses.

Capt. Aleshire, U. S. A., will come to Paris to-day to inspect about eighty horses which have been bought in Bourbon by Bayless & Kern for the cavalry service. The average price paid for the horses was about eighty-five dollars. The horses will be shipped to Tampa. The lot shipped to that point about ten days ago was much complimented by the army officers.

Meeting Of Choral Society.

THE meeting of the Paris Choral Society will be held next Monday evening instead of Friday in the basement of the First Presbyterian Church. A full attendance is desired as Romberg's "Lady of the Bell" will be taken up on that night.

GOSSIPY PARAGRAPHS.

Theatrical And Otherwise—Remarks In The Foyer.

Maude Adams' 300th performance of "The Little Minister," will occur on June 14th, at the Garrick Theatre, New York, when her season will close.

A story likely to cause considerable comment is Percival Pollard's "The Kiss That Killed," which is the main feature of the June issue of Tales From Town Topics, New York.

A Paris lady says that her husband, who is known to be of a convivial disposition, is like the Spanish fleet, because she never knows where to find him. When she does at last find him he is "bottled up".

Thos. W. Keene, the eminent American tragedian, died Wednesday night in New York from the result of an operation for appendicitis. He was fifty-eight years old, and leaves a wife and two children. His name in private life was Thos. Engleason, and he was one of the most popular actors on the American stage.

Judging by the applause of a cultured and well-dressed audience the program of the musical and dramatic entertainment given Wednesday night at the opera house must have been a pleasing one. Miss Ella Martin's exquisite voice simply captivated the audience, winning triple eucoures. Mr. James Condon sang two numbers in splendid voice and was forced to respond to an encore. Miss Ora Slaughter's excellent piano solo was generally applauded, as was also Mr. Geo. Browner's song "What Did Dewey Do To Them?" The Dewey Orchestra, composed of Messrs. Chas. Foote, Elmer Foote, Ben Downey and Chas. Hnkl rendered several pleasing selections, the Foote family—the Foote and Miss Ettavieve have an instrumental trio which is a great applause! Miss Helen beautiful danc, was applauded.

The musical program was under the direction of Prof. A. M. Gutzzeit, who was also the accompanist. The program concluded with the one act drama "A Loyal Coquette." The leading male role was well acted by Mr. W. H. Davis, whose conception of the part was admirable. Miss Mary Irvine Davis created the leading female role in exceptionally clever style. The remaining part was acceptably done by Mr. Geo. Browner. For obvious reasons the opinions of others in regard to the play are quoted. Mr. E. T. Porter, in the Lexington Leader says:

"The event of the evening was the production for the first time of a clever one-act play or sketch written by Mr. Walt'r Champ, senior editor of THE BOURBON NEWS, and entitled "A Loyal Coquette," which requires but three people for its production. The play was well cast and most excellently handled. The play, though brief, is well written."

The Millersburg Raven says: "It was a captivating little production and was well presented."

ONE BENEATH OLD GLORY.

Don't you hear the tramp of soldiers?
Don't you hear the bugles play?
In the sunlight far away?
Don't you feel the ground all trembling
Neath the tread of many feet?
They are coming, tens of thousands,
To the army and the fleet.

They are Yankees, they are Johnnies,
They're for north and south no more;
They are one, and glad to follow
When Old Glory goes before.

From Atlantic to Pacific,
From the Pine Tree to Lone Star,
They are gathering round Old Glory,
And they're marching to the war.

Don't you see the harbors guarded
By those bristling dogs of war?
Don't you hear them growling, barking,
At the fleet beyond the bar?
Don't you hear the Jack Tars cheering,
Brave as sailor lads can be?
Don't you see the water boiling
Where the squadron put to sea?

They are Yankees, they are Johnnies,
They're for north and south no more;
They are one, and glad to follow
When Old Glory goes before.
From Atlantic to Pacific,
From the Pine Tree to Lone Star,
They have gathered round Old Glory,
And they're sailing to the war.

Don't you hear the horses prancing?
Don't you hear the sabres clash?
Don't you hear the cannon roaring?
Don't you hear the musket crash?
Oh, you'll wish that you had gone,
When you hear the shouts and cheering
For the boys who whipped the Don!

There'll be Yankees, there'll be Johnnies,
There'll be north and south no more,
When the boys come marching homeward
With Old Glory borne before.
From Atlantic to Pacific,
From the Pine Tree to Lone Star,
They'll be one beneath Old Glory
After coming from the war.

LORD TOTTENHAM

By E. NESBIT.

I HAD always thought that the books were right, and that the best way to make your fortune was to rescue an old gentleman in distress. Then he brings you up as his own son; but if you preferred to go on being your father's son I expect the old gentleman would make it up to you in some other way. In books the least thing does it. You put up the railway carriage window, or you pick up his purse when he drops it, or you say a hymn when he suddenly asks you to, and then your fortune is made. The others did not seem to care much about the rescue. They said there wasn't any deadly peril, and we should have to make one before we could rescue the old gentleman from it; but Oswald didn't see that it mattered. However, he thought he would try some of the easier ways first by himself. So he waited about the station and pulled up railway carriage windows for old gentlemen who looked likely; but nothing happened, and at last the porters said he was a nuisance. So that was no go. No one had ever asked him to say a hymn, though he had learnt a nice short one, beginning: "New every morning;" and when an old gentleman did drop a two-shilling piece just by Ellis's, the hair dresser's, and Oswald picked it up and was just thinking what he should say when he returned it, the old gentleman caught him by the collar and called him a young thief. It would have been very unpleasant for Oswald if he hadn't happened to be a very brave boy and known the policeman on that beat very well indeed. So the policeman backed him up, and the old gentleman said he was sorry and offered Oswald sixpence. Oswald refused it with polite disdain, and nothing more happened at all.

When Oswald had tried by himself and it had not come off he said to the others: "We're wasting our time not trying to rescue the old gentleman in deadly peril. Let's do something."

It was dinner time, and Pincher was going round getting the bits off the plates. There were plenty, because it was cold mutton day. And Alice said:

"It's only fair to try Oswald's way; he has tried all the things the others have thought of. Why couldn't we rescue Lord Tottenham?"

Lord Tottenham is the old gentleman who walks over the heath every day at three o'clock, and when he gets half way if there is no one about he changes his collar and throws the dirty one into the furze bushes.

Dickie said: "Lord Tottenham's all right; but where's the deadly peril?"

And we couldn't think of any. There are no highwaymen on Blackheath now. I am sorry to say; though Oswald said half of us could be highwaymen and the other half the rescue party. Dora said it would be wrong to be a highwayman, and so we had to give that up.

Then Alice said: "What about Pincher?"

And we all saw at once that it could be done. Pincher is our fox terrier. He is very well bred, and he does know one or two things, though we never could teach him to beg. But if you tell him to hold on he will do it, even if you only say: "Seize him!" in a whisper.

So we arranged it all. Dora said she wouldn't play; she said she thought it was wrong, and she knew it was silly; so we left her out—and she went and sat in the dining-room, so as to be able to say she didn't have anything to do with it if we got into trouble.

Alice and H. O. were to hide in the furze bushes where Lord Tottenham changes his collar, and they were to say "Seize him!" to Pincher, and then when Pincher had seized Lord Tottenham we were to go and rescue him from his deadly peril. And he would say: "How can I reward you, my noble young preservers?" and it would be all right.

So we went up to the heath. We were afraid of being late. Oswald told the others what praecastination was, so they got to the furze bushes a little after two o'clock, and it was rather cold. Alice and H. O. and Pincher hid; but Pincher did not like it any more than they did, and as we three walked up and down we heard him whining. And Alice kept saying: "I am so cold. Isn't he coming yet? And H. O. wanted to come out and jump about to warm himself. But we told him he must learn to be a Spartan boy, and that he ought to be very thankful that he hadn't got a beastly fox eating his inside all the time. H. O. is our little brother, and we are not going to let it be our fault if he grows up a milkop. Because it was not really cold. So they stayed where they were. And at last, when even we other three were beginning to feel rather chilly, we saw Lord Tottenham's big black cloak coming along, flapping in the wind like a great bird. So we asked to Alice:

"Hist! he approaches. You'll know when to set Pincher on by hearing Lord Tottenham talking to himself; he always does while he is taking off his collar."

Then we had walked away whistling, to show we were not thinking of anything. Our lips were rather cold, but we managed to do it.

Lord Tottenham came striding along, talking as usual. People call him the mad protectionist. I don't know what it means, but I don't think people ought to call a lord such names.

As he passed us he said: "Ruin of the country, sir! Fatal error, fatal error," and then we looked back and saw he was getting quite near where Pincher was and Alice and H. O. We walked on, so that he shouldn't think we were looking, and in a minute we heard Pincher bark, and then nothing for a bit, and then we looked around, and sure enough good old Pincher had got Lord Tottenham by the trouser leg, and was holding on, so we started to run.

Lord Tottenham had got his collar off—it was sticking out sideways under his ears, and he was shouting "Help! help! murder!" exactly as if some one had explained to him beforehand what he was to do. Pincher was growling and snarling and holding on. When we got up to him I said:

"Dickie, we must rescue this good old man."

Lord Tottenham roared in his fury: "Good old man be something-or-other! Call the dog off!"

So Dickie said: "It is a dangerous task, but who would hesitate to do an act of true bravery?"

And all the time Pincher was worrying and snarling, and Lord Tottenham shouting to us to get the dog away. And he was dancing about in the road with Pincher hanging on like grim death, and his collar flapping about where it was undone.

Then Noel said: "Haste, ere yet it be too late," so I said to Lord Tottenham: "Stand still, aged sir, and I will endeavor to alleviate your distress."

He stood still and I stooped down and caught hold of Pincher and whispered: "Drop it, sir, drop it."

So then Pincher dropped it, and Lord Tottenham fastened his collar again—he never does change it if there's any one looking—and he said:

"I'm much obliged, I'm sure. Nasty, vicious brute. Here's something to drink my health."

But Oswald explained that we are rectifiers and do not drink people's healths. So Lord Tottenham said: "Well, I'm much obliged anyway. And now I come to think of it, of course you're not young ruffians, but gentlemen's sons, eh? Still, you won't be above taking a tip from an old boy—I wasn't when I was your age," and he pulled out a half sovereign.

It was very silly, but now we had done it I felt it would be beastly mean to take the old boy's drink after putting him in such a funk. He didn't say anything about bringing us up as his own sons, so I didn't know what to do. I told Pincher go, and was just going to say he was very welcome and we'd rather not have the money, which seemed the best way out of it when that beastly dog spoilt the whole show. Directly I let go he began to jump up at us and bark for joy and try to lick our faces. He was so proud of what he'd done.

Lord Tottenham opened his eyes, and he just said:

"The dog seems to know you."

And then Oswald saw it was all up, and he said, "good morning," and tried to get away.

But Lord Tottenham said: "Not so fast," and he caught Noel by the collar. Noel gave a howl, and Alice ran out from the bushes. Noel is her favorite; I'm sure I don't know why. Lord Tottenham looked at her, and he said: "So there are more of you." And then H. O. came out.

"Do you complete the party?" Lord Tottenham asked him, and H. O. said there weren't any more of us.

Lord Tottenham turned sharp off and began to walk away, holding Noel by the collar. We caught up with him and asked him where he was going, and he said: "To the police station."

So then I said: "Well, don't take Noel—he's not strong and he easily gets upset. Besides, it wasn't his doing. If you want to take anyone, take me—it was my idea entirely."

Dickie behaved very well. He said: "If you take Oswald I'll go too—but don't take Noel; he's such a delicate little chap."

Lord Tottenham stopped, and he said: "You should have thought of that before."

Noel was howling all the time and his face was very white, and Alice said: "Oh, do let Noel go, dear, good, kind Lord Tottenham, he'll faint if you don't—I know he will; he does sometimes. Oh, I wish we'd never done it! Dora said it was wrong."

"Dora displayed considerable common sense," said Lord Tottenham, and he let Noel go, and Alice put her arms round Noel and tried to cheer him up. Then Lord Tottenham said: "Will you give me your word of honor not to try to escape?"

So we said we would.

"Then follow me," he said, and led the way to a bench. We all followed, and Pincher too with his tail between his legs. He knew something was wrong. Then Lord Tottenham sat down, and he made Oswald and Dickie and H. O. stand in front of him, but he let Alice and Noel sit down. And he said: "You set your dog on me, and you tried to make me believe you were saving me from it. And you would have taken my half-sovereign. Such conduct is most—no, you shall tell me what it is, sir, and speak the truth."

So I had to say it was most ungentlemanly; but I said I hadn't been going to take the half-sovereign.

"Then what did you do it for?" he asked. "The truth, mind."

So I said: "I see now it was very silly, and Dora said it was wrong; but it didn't seem so till we did it. We wanted to restore the fallen fortunes of our house, and in the books if you rescue an old gentleman from deadly peril he makes your fortune; and there wasn't any deadly peril, so we made Pincher into one—and so—" I was so ashamed I couldn't go on, for it did seem an awfully mean thing. Lord Tottenham said:

"A very nice way to make your fortune—by deceit and trickery! I have a horror of dogs. If I'd been a weak man the shock might have killed me. What do you think of yourselves, eh?"

We were all crying except Oswald, and the others say he was, and Lord Tottenham went on:

"Well, I see you're sorry. Let this be a lesson to you; and we'll say no more about it. I'm an old man now, but I was young once."

Then Alice slid along the bench close to him and said: "I think you're very good to forgive us, and we are really very, very sorry. But we wanted to be like the children in books, only we never have the chances they have. But we are sorry—very sorry. And I know Oswald wasn't going to take the half-sovereign. Directly you said that about a tip I began to feel bad inside, and I whispered to H. O. that I wished we hadn't."

Then Lord Tottenham stood up, and he looked like the "Death of Nelson," for he is clean shaven and it is a good face, and he said:

"Always remember never to do a dishonorable thing, for money or for anything else in the world."

And we promised we would remember. Then he took off his hat and we took off ours, and he went away and we went home. I never felt so cheap in all my life.

Dora said: "I told you so; but we didn't mind even that so much, though it was hard to hear. It was what Lord Tottenham had said about ungentlemanly."

We didn't go on to the heath for a week after that; but at last we went, and we waited for him by the bench. When he came along Alice said:

"Please, Lord Tottenham, we have not been on the heath for a week, to be a punishment, because you let us off."

And we have brought you a present each, if you will take them, to show you we are willing to make it up."

He sat down on the bench and we gave him our presents. Oswald gave him a sixpenny compass; he bought it with his own money on purpose to give him. The needle would not move after I'd had it a day or two; but Lord Tottenham used to be an admiral, so he will be able to make that go all right. Alice had made him a shaving case with a rose worked on it. H. O. gave him his knife—the same one he once cut all the buttons off his best suit with. Dickie gave him his prize "Naval Heroes," because it was the best thing he had, and Noel gave him a piece of poetry he had made himself:

"When sin and shame bow down the brow,
Then people feel just how we do now.
We are so sorry with grief and pain,
We never will be so ungentlemanly again."

Lord Tottenham seemed very pleased. He thanked us, and talked to us for a bit, and when he said good-by he said:

"All's fair weather now, mates," and shook hands.

And when we met him he nods to us; so he can't really be going on thinking us ungentlemanly any more.—Pall Mall Gazette.

An Austrian Dogberry.

The Vienna men of law have recently distinguished themselves in a unique manner. A Waechau peasant had been caught in the criminal act of throwing stones at rabbits. He had not hit them, and the rabbits had decamped without so much as suspecting the attack. But the peasant was hailed before the high courts of justice. His defense was that the rabbits had been close to his gardens, and that he had only tried to frighten the greedy rodents off his cabbages. All the same, he was condemned to three days' imprisonment. The peasant appealed against the sentence, but in vain. If a rabbit had been killed, said the authorities, the peasant would certainly have stolen it, and stealing a rabbit was an unlawful action. And thus the man from Waechau went to prison for three days, and the wise judges of Vienna have bounded into fame for their new method of applying the "if" and "and" theory.—Westminster Gazette.

Attorney Too Confident.

A German on trial many years ago in western Ohio for maliciously cutting a neighbor's cow had so convinced his attorney of his innocence that, although the evidence against him was totally insufficient to convict him, his attorney, in order to give him the complete vindication, placed his client on the stand and asked him point-blank: "Did you cut the cow?" The effect was startling. With blanched face and quivering lips the accused stared in agony at the court and stammered: "Mein Gott, shudge, I can't tell you a lie. I know I shall go into hell if I do. I cut out cow."—Case and Comment.

A DANGEROUS POSITION.

The Captain of a Modern Warship Must Be a Brave and Ready Man.

Of all on board, the man who stands in the greatest peril is the captain. In the battleships and cruisers his position is in a cylindrical box of steel, placed just under the bridge, well forward, which is called the conning tower. The armor of it is thick enough ordinarily to resist the penetration of heavy projectiles. It contains the speaking tubes and electrical wires whereby he communicates with the guns, engines and helm, and sometimes apparatus whereby he is enabled to fire the guns himself after they are laid upon the enemy. His field of vision is limited to what he can see through a little horizontal slit on about the level of his eye. In point of frightful responsibility no situation in the world can compare with that which is occupied by the man who stands in that tower and directs the movement of his ship. After the conflict once begins the din about him will be something infernal. Upon him the fire of the enemy will be concentrated, and upon the exterior of that steel drum in which he is shut up there will be a continuous hail of iron and steel. Shells will burst everywhere around it, and to that babel will be added the roar of the force blast under the engines, the tremendous reports of the heavy guns, and the din of the quick-fire and machine guns in chorus. In such circumstances as this, aided by such knowledge as he can get by looking out through the little peep hole in front of him as well as the smoke will let him, the captain must control the tremendous forces under his command, and his decisions are matters of seconds.

Nobody now believes that a captain who finds his vision through the slits of the tower cut off by smoke, will stay thus shut up. It is extremely doubtful if it will be physically possible for him to remain there after the shells commence to hammer its sides and burst against it, and, in any event, the intense anxiety to see and know clearly what the enemy is doing will inevitably lead him to take his chances in the open. Conning tower or no conning tower, his duty is to place himself at whatever point he can manage his ships to the best advantage, and this he will certainly do. Lord Charles Beresford, with grim humor, has suggested that the captain's safest place is not in but behind his conning tower, "because then he has two thicknesses of steel between himself and the enemy, don't you see?" but while conning tower armor may resist penetration, it is by no means certain that the whole structure will not be swept away by the first heavy projectile which squarely hits it.

As for the admiral, there is nowadays no rigging for him to ascend, and he would be promptly blown out of it if there were. In fact, after a fleet engagement has begun, there is no place in all at all. He has no business in the conning tower, no business at the helm, and he cannot stay on deck. It is proposed to build a separate conning tower for him, or to take him off the flag ship, and put him on a small, swift vessel, so that he could choose his position and conveniently give his orders by signals. The difficulty with this would be that the enemy would concentrate his fire on that tower or ship with the certainty of sinking the latter, and rendering the former uninhabitable. The problem, therefore, is still unsolved.

Against the effect of a torpedo if it gets to the hull, there is no safeguard. The heaviest battleship is just as vulnerable as the lightest gunboat. The best that can be hoped is that the destruction will be limited to a few compartments, so that those remaining intact will be sufficient to keep the ship afloat. But this only puts off the evil hour. As the vessel becomes water-logged, her speed falls off and her maneuvering capacity is reduced, so that the enemy may then pick his position of advantage and shatter her with his guns or administer a coup de grace with another torpedo.

Altogether the prospects of one's coming out of a naval engagement unharmed are far from bright. Even the wounded stand a poorer chance than was the case in the old wooden ships. How the surgeons are to get at them with the vessel divided into a honeycomb of compartments with no direct interconnection where they can be conveyed directly from the guns without traversing doors and passages intricate and many is difficult to understand. Those who happen to be stationed in the battle ships directly over the torpedo or banding rooms may perhaps be lowered at once to surgeons there placed; but what is to become of the rest in more distant positions is not clear.

All of this goes to show the great advantage of the almost perfect discipline and drill now prevailing in the navy. Indeed, it never has been so completely recognized as it is at the present day that the best protection for a warship's crew is their own fighting capacity. No armor is so efficient as celerity of action and good gunnery. That ship will win and incidentally save the greater number of lives of its men, which first plants an effective projectile in a vital part of the enemy. The sea fight will not be gained by the ship which withstands the most pounding, but by the ship which pounds hardest and quickest and so destroys or impairs her antagonist's pounding capacity. It is that swift attack and superior marksmanship which above all else characterize the crews of the warships of the United States, and it is in just this that the Spaniards are most deficient.—N. Y. Independent.

How He Escaped.

"Does your wife ever ask you to do shopping for her?"

AN EDUCATED CHINAMAN.

The Mortifying Mistake of a Green Reporter in Getting an Interview.

Numberless are the tricks which newspaper reporters play upon one another to relieve the squalid "grind" of their calling. Two young men employed on a morning paper in a large city were detailed one day to call upon the resident Chinaman and "interview" them respecting some immigration measure then pending in congress. One of the two reporters was a beginner and the other, an experienced man, naturally assumed the management of the assignment.

"Billings," he said, after they had invaded several laundries without any important result, "here is a tea store. I wish you would go in and talk with the proprietor. I want to know what he thinks about Chinamen voting. I'll go and pull off an interview with the man who runs this cigar shop next door. Remember to use the very simplest English at your command."

The young reporter went inside the tea store, took out his note book, and thus addressed the proprietor, who happened to be alone at the moment:

"John, how? Me—me—Telegraph, John? Newspaper—savvy, John? Newspaper—print things. Unstan? Me want know what John think about Chinamen vote, see? What John think—Chinaman vote—all same Melican man? Savvy, John? Vote? What think?"

The Chinaman listened to him with profound gravity until he had finished, and replied:

"The question of granting the right of suffrage to Chinese citizens who have come to the United States with the avowed intention of making this country their permanent home is one that has occupied the attention of thoughtful men of all parties for years, and it may become in time one of paramount importance. At present, however, it seems to me there is no exigency requiring an expression of opinion from me upon the subject. You will please excuse me."

The young reporter went outside and leaned against a lamp post to rest and recover from a sudden faintness that had taken possession of him. His comrade had purposely "steered him against" one of the best-educated Chinamen in the United States.—Youth's Companion.

A Test of Friendship.

The following incident is told concerning John Ruskin, the English art critic. Mr. Ruskin was so merciless in his criticism of the work of artists that a cold word from his pen would send back an important picture unsold to the painter's studio. He had criticised in his fearless way a picture of a well-known painter, who was very much grieved at the effect. The writer, on hearing of the sorrow, wrote to the artist that he regretted he could not speak more favorably of the picture, but hoped it would make no difference in their friendship. The artist, it is said, wrote in reply the following note: "Dear Ruskin—Next time I meet you I shall knock you down, but I hope it will make no difference in our friendship." Utica (N. Y.) Observer.

It Affected the Supply.

"How do you sell eggs?" asked a Champa street woman of her groceryman.

"Eighteen cents a dozen—war prices, on know."

"But what difference does war make with the hens?"

"Why, don't you see, all the Black Spanish hens have been killed off, and they were the greatest layers of any breed we had."—Denver Times.

STOUT POST ANCHOR.

Just the Thing for Country Places Where Temporary Wire Fences Are Used from Time to Time.

Where temporary wire fences are used to any considerable extent, the corner or end posts may be anchored as shown in the illustration. The large rock, a, is sunk into the ground as deep as the post is placed and the earth is solidly trampled above it. Place the wire around the stone before it is put into the ground, then pass it around the top of the post. By using a stick, b, the wire can be tightened if there is any tendency to become loose. To move the fence, loosen the lower strand from the posts. Begin at one end and make a coil about two feet across. Roll this on the ground, crossing and recrossing the strand of wire with the roll, about every foot of length on the strand. The barbs will hold it and keep the roll together. When the roll is as large as is convenient to handle, cut the wire and begin again. When replacing fasten one end to the post where the top wire is to stay and roll along the ground close to the posts. Follow with the second one a little further off and then the third. Experience has proved to me that this is the easiest, quickest and best plan to remove wire fence, as after some practice it can be done quickly.—E. D. Smith, in Orange Judd Farmer.

HOW TO ANCHOR A POST.

POULTRY DISEASES.

Quite a Number of Them, Including Roup, Cholera, Influenza and Diphtheria, Are Contagious.

Drs. Smith and Moore, of the bureau of animal industry, Washington, D. C., have made important investigations on the above subject. They find that "black head" in turkeys, diphtheria, cholera and roup in fowls are contagious. They also believe that so-called roup, influenza and sometimes cholera are different stages of the one disease—diphtheria. However this may be, it is stated that diphtheria is infectious, and it may be transmitted to children. Therefore the great importance of separating all sick fowls and confining them to some outbuilding, keeping the children away. Doctoring sick fowls is very unprofitable business, and there is seldom any reason why the fowls should be sick, provided you have done your part. Your part is to keep the roost clean and free from lice. Give clean water daily. Fill up all low places where water is apt to collect and clear away all rubbish—burning it is the proper thing. Furnish good, sharp grit for the fowls, and don't get the poultry so fat that the organs will be so clogged that they cannot perform their normal duties. Make the roost tight and dry and provide convenient dusting places. Make the fowls exercise by scratching in litter. In fact, this last point and clean fresh water will go a long way toward keeping the fowls in good health. There is no kind of stock on the farm that is more healthy than fowls when they have proper care. Too many people try to crowd 100 fowls in too small a house. This not only lessens the number of eggs, but is apt to breed disease as well. The fowls in the center of a crowded perch will get too warm, and therefore colds will follow. A house 20 by 30 feet is not a bit too large for 100 fowls. The proper way is to divide the fowls up into smaller flocks of say 12 to 20 fowls each, and separate them during the cold weather at least.—Agricultural Epitomist.

AMONG THE POULTRY.

The pullet is so called until she is a year old. Never feed sulphur to fowls in damp or rainy weather. Bone meal can usually be fed to growing chickens to advantage. Be sure and provide plenty of shade for fowls during the summer. In quantity of eggs pullets will excel, but not in quality for hatching. The loss of feathers often proceeds from unclean dusting arrangements. When a chicken picks itself frequently it is a good indication that it is lousy. With guineas—to insure fertile eggs—it will be best to keep them in pairs. A good dust bath will help materially in keeping the fowls in a good condition. It is a good plan to dip the eggs in tepid water the day before they are to hatch. Care and cleanliness in feeding fowls will be richly repaid in increased health and thrift. Turkeys are good foragers and will pick up their food from the fields during the summer. Geese are kept largely for the feathers they yield, and if the most is made out of them, care must be taken to pick them regularly.—St. Louis Republic.

THE HOG IN SUMMER.

If Kept Healthy and Thrifty the Animals Are Sure to Lay On Flesh Very Rapidly.

If the best growth of the hogs is secured during the summer it is essential to maintain good health and keep the hogs as comfortable as possible. Plenty of good clover or grass with a good variety of ground grain or middlings made into slop with milk is an important item in maintaining thrift. But in addition there must be good shelter under which the hogs can lie when their appetite is satisfied, protected from the hot sun and from rains.

If the best health is maintained it is essential that the bedding for the hogs be dry, and this cannot be assured, even in summer, unless a dry shelter is provided. The shelter in summer should, of course, be well ventilated. When on pasture, rather more than when on dry feed, hogs require plenty of salt, and one of the best ways of supply is to keep a box under shelter in a convenient place filled with salt and ashes; three parts ashes—wood ashes are best—and one part of salt. A little copperas added will make it still better. Replenish as often as may be necessary. There is no danger in this way of any of them eating too much salt and ashes, and this plan will give better results than to give it at stated intervals.

Another item in maintaining good health is to supply plenty of fresh water. No matter how much milk or good slop is given, nothing will do so well in satisfying thirst as pure fresh water, and the hogs should have all that they will drink every day. If they do not have access to a running stream fresh water should be given in the troughs.

Very little bedding is necessary, but it should be changed occasionally.

With clover and a slop made of middlings and milk it is an exceptional case when they will get too fat to thrive well, as middlings and clover furnish more of the elements that make muscle and bone than fat. But with corn and clover, if the hogs are given all that they will eat every day, they may keep too fat to thrive as they should. As for growing pigs, especially during the summer, there is no advantage in keeping them very fat. Better health and growth can be maintained if they are kept in a thrifty condition. If they are kept healthy and thrifty they will nearly always prove profitable.—St. Louis Republic.

CLEAN FARM BOILER.

An Excellent Plan for Covering the Kettle When It Is Constructed Out of Doors.

Portable farm boilers for cooking vegetables for hogs and other animals are now made in many styles, but on many farms the question of expense will lead to the using still of the old-fashioned "set" kettle. It is a common practice to set such a kettle in brick, and leave it exposed to the weather. The kettle is thus constantly being filled with rain, and the top bricks loosened. The accompanying cut shows an excellent plan for covering the kettle when it is constructed out of doors. This keeps everything snug and dry and presents a much better appearance than does the kettle that is exposed to the weather. Such a kettle can be located convenient to the various farm buildings, to economize labor in feeding out the cooked food. Whatever may be the relative chemical value of cooked and uncooked food for farm animals, it is safe to say that the digestibility of vegetables is greatly aided by cooking, which is a most important point in the case of feeding young animals.—N. Y. Tribune.

Demand for Merino Rams.

Among the most conspicuous features of the present brisk trade in purebred sheep is the demand for Merino rams. The advance in the price of wool has greatly stimulated the inquiries for rams of the fine wool varieties and breeders report their stocks pretty well cleaned up. It would be well if those who resort to this cross would have regard somewhat unto the bodily excellence of the rams they buy. If it cost as much to raise a pound of wool in the central west as some authorities have repeatedly stated there is surely very little encouragement yet to embark in the wool-growing industry without regard to mutton production.—Breeder's Gazette.

Bulky Food in Summer.

There is no necessity for giving cut clover to fowls if they have the run of a grass plot. If confined in yards, cut grass of any kind may be given once a day, or a sod of grass may be placed in the yard for the hens to pick. Bulky food cheapens the cost because it promotes digestion, thereby keeping the fowls in a thrifty condition and inducing egg production. A diet consisting exclusively of grain is too concentrated and unfits the birds for enduring the warmth of summer. Bulky food is a necessity at all seasons of the year, but more particularly so now.—American Gardening.

It is poor economy to attempt to grow a crop of small grain in a young orchard.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mrs. Thomas T. Roe, of Washington, claims to be the first, and Mrs. N. H. Van Sighlen, of Chicago, the second, woman to ride a woman's bicycle, which was done in both cases in 1887.

Mrs. Roger Wolcott, wife of Gov. Wolcott, of Massachusetts, is erecting a monument to the memory of her ancestor, Col. William Prescott, one of the heroes of Bunker Hill.

Two children of Mrs. Parnell remain, both in Ireland. Annie, now Mrs. McDermott, lives in County Wicklow, and John Henry, who was a peach grower in Georgia for a number of years, now holds a public office in Dublin.

Rear Admiral Dewey, the hero of Manila, entered the naval academy from Vermont. Graduating a little before the war, his early active service included participation in the gunboat fighting that preceded the capture of Port Donelson and the attacks on Fort Fisher. He became a captain in 1882.

Henry Allen Howard can do strange things. He can stick hat pins through his cheeks, lips and calves, drive nails through his feet and hands, and perform many similar wonders. He recently gave an exhibition at the Astor house, in New York city, and demonstrated that wounds of the character above described cause him no pain.

LITERARY NOTES.

"Under the Eaves" is the title of the new story which Bret Harte has just completed.

In 1897 nearly 8,000 volumes were published in Great Britain, as against 6,500 in 1896.

The assertion is made that for the last 20 years Alphonse Daudet never made less than $20,000 a year from his work.

Germany publishes more than twice as many books as France every year, from 20,000 to 25,000 being her annual output to the 10,000 of France.

There is a prospect of a new and authorized life of Mme. Patti being written by a well-known journalist who has for many years been familiar with the musical world.

The original of Sandy, the laird of Cockpen, in Du Maurier's "Trilby," has just died. He was T. R. Lamont and the description of him is said to be remarkably accurate. He studied art in Paris.

"The Ambassador," Mrs. Craigie's sentimental comedy in four acts, is to be produced in London in the autumn, and will not be brought out in book-form until then. Mrs. George Alexander, who has secured all the dramatic rights, will play the title role.

In honor of the seventieth birthday of Count Leo Tolstoy, which falls on August 28th (O. S. the town author of Moscow still is establishing a literary school which is to be named Count Tolstoy will celebrate the same time the fiftieth anniversary of his literary activity.

FOR THE MAN WHO LAUGHS.

A Distinction.—Marie—"I understand that you are engaged to be married." Daisy—"No; merely engaged."—Truth.

Unexpected Answer.—Clerk—"It is just 20 years since I entered into your employment." Principal—"That shows how patient I am."—Flegende Blatter.

From a Personal Standpoint.—"Don't you think," said one young man, "that literature is in a state of decline?" "Unquestionably," replied the other. "It's in a chronic state of decline—with thanks."—Washington Star.

Mary—I remember, when I was a little girl the gentlemen, when they called, would hold me on their laps and tell me fairy stories. Maude—Well, I suppose they do the fairy tale part of it yet.—Yonkers Statesman.

Caller (to child, whose mother has left the room for a moment)—"Come here to me, my dear." Infant Terrible—"No, I mustn't do that. Mamma told me I must sit sitting in the chair, because there's a hole in the cushion."—Glasgow Evening Citizen.

UNFORTUNATE COLORS.

Jaundiced Man with Red Necktie Is Taken for a Spaniard and Has a Narrow Escape.

The man with the yellow jaundice leaned up against the drug store at the corner of Harrison and Halsted street and wiped the perspiration from his forehead. He was badly out of breath and he consequently talked rather spasmodically to his friend.

"I tell you, I've had a mighty narrow escape," he gasped.

"Why, how's that?" asked his companion.

"They putty near mobbed me just now down here on Blue Island avenue."

"Mobbed you? Why, what in the deuce are you talkin' about?"

"That's right. That's what they putty near did. They just liked to got my pelt. I tell you—an I hadn't done a thing, either."

"What did they have agin you?"

"You see that red necktie I got on? Well, that was the cause of the whole trouble. I was goin' along down Blue Island when I came to a gang out in front of a saloon talkin' war. I stopped to hear what the latest was. I wasn't doin' a thing when some cove sings out: 'Look at this Spaniard right here in the crowd.' Everybody turns on me an' a brick just grazes my ear. I says: 'I ain't no Spaniard; what you talkin' about?'"

"You bet he is; he's got the Spanish flag on 'im right now," yells another. But I didn't catch on yet. 'That's right,' shouts another man, 'the yaller's on his face and the red's in his necktie—lynch him.' The whole crowd made for me and I cut for this corner. I give 'em the dodge two or three times and got away. But say, I've got to wear a different colored necktie till I git over these yaller janders."—Chicago Chronicle.

HOW RELIEF CAME.

From Cole County Democrat, Jefferson City, Mo.

When la grippe visited this section, about seven years ago, Herman H. Evelyer, of 811 W. Main St., Jefferson, Mo., was one of the victims, and has since been troubled with the after-effects of the disease. He is a well-known contractor and builder, a business requiring much mental and physical work. A year ago his health began to fail, and he could no longer continue work. That he lives to-day is almost a miracle. He says:

"I was troubled with shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart and a general debility. My back also pained me severely."

"I tried one doctor after another and numerous remedies suggested by my friends, but without apparent benefit, and began to give up hope."

"Then I saw Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People extolled in a St. Louis paper, and after investigation, decided to give them a trial."

"After using the first box I felt wonderfully relieved and was satisfied that pills were putting me on the road to recovery. I bought two more boxes and continued taking them."

"After taking four boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People I am restored to good health. I feel like a new man, and having the will and energy of my former days returned, I am capable of transacting my business with increased ambition."

"Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are a wonderful medicine and anyone that is afflicted with shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart, nervous prostration and general debility, will find that these pills are the specific. HERMAN H. EVELYER."

Subscribed and sworn to before me, a Notary Public, this 24th day of May, 1897.

Mr. Evelyer will gladly answer any inquiry regarding this if stamp is enclosed.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure people troubled with the after-effects of the grippe, because they act directly on the impure blood. They are also a specific for chronic erysipelas, catarrh, rheumatism and all diseases due to impure or impoverished blood.

Our American Policy.

The policy of this country regarding foreign complications seems likely to remain conservative. The Monroe doctrine, according to the declaration of our leading politicians, will be sustained, but patience and prudence in official quarters will restrain the exuberance of public opinion. The wisest and most prudent course for the rheumatic and the malarious is to use Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which also cures kidney complaint and dyspepsia.

A GREAT REMEDY.

Greatly Tested.

Greatly Recommended.

The loss of the hair is one of the most serious losses a woman can undergo. Beautiful hair gives many a woman a claim to beauty which would be utterly wanting if the locks were short and scanty. It is almost as serious a loss when the natural hue of the hair begins to fade, and the shining tresses of chestnut and auburn are changed to gray or to a faded shadow of their former brightness. Such a loss is no longer a necessity. There is one remedy which may well be called a great remedy by reason of its great success in stopping the falling of the hair, cleansing the scalp of dandruff, and restoring the lost color to gray or faded tresses. Dr. Ayer's Hair Vigor is a standard and reliable preparation, in use in thousands of homes, and recommended by everyone who has tested it and experienced the remarkable results that follow its use. It makes hair grow. It restores the original color to hair that has turned gray or faded out. It stops hair from falling, cleanses the scalp of dandruff, and gives the hair a thickness and gloss that no other preparation can produce.

Mrs. Herzmann, of 356 East 68th St., New York City, writes:

"A little more than a year ago, my hair began turning gray and falling out, and although I tried ever so many things to prevent a continuance of these conditions, I obtained no satisfaction until I tried Dr. Ayer's Hair Vigor. After using one bottle my hair was restored to its natural color, and ceased falling out."—MRS. HERZMANN, 356 East 68th St., New York City.

"I have sold Dr. Ayer's Hair Vigor for fifteen years, and I do not know of a case where it did not give entire satisfaction. I have been, and am now using it myself for dandruff and gray hair, and am thoroughly convinced that it is the best on the market. Nothing that I ever tried can touch it. It affords me great pleasure to recommend it to the public."—FRANK M. GROVE, FAUNSDALE, ALA.

There's more on this subject in Dr. Ayer's Catarrh Cure. A store of cures told by the cured. This book of 100 pages is sent free, on request, by the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

HOW THE GURKHAS FIGHT.

They Punctuated Their Attacks on a Fortress With Football Games.

Not two miles from Nilt progress was again arrested—and this time for weeks—by the fortresses of Thol and Maum. These seemed impregnable, for where the slopes of the cliff were not inaccessible the defenders had turned the water course on the edge of them, so that they were quickly coated with ice.

In front of these strongholds the officers and Gurkhas played football every afternoon, the latter, who were very keen, kicking the ball without bending the knee. The Hunzas, however, objected to the game, and as soon as one commenced would open fire, which the players regarded not. So the Kanjuts started a game of polo on the maidan outside Thol, but the British fire was more effective, for the Gurkhas are capital marksmen, and the game was soon dropped. Finally a Dogra sepoy named Nagdu discovered a gully which seemed possible and ascended this alone.

The following night, 50 Gurkhas and 50 Dogras of the imperial service troops under Lieutenant Manners-Smith, an expert cragsman, hid at the foot of the gully and remained shivering there for hours, until at early dawn the remainder of the force diverted the enemy's attention by a continuous fire.

Followed by his 50 Gurkhas, Manners-Smith commenced the perilous ascent, and behind them came Taylor and his Dogras, with the mortifying result that after two hours' climbing the gully was found to be blocked. Steps were retraced to where the gully forked, and there he again led upward in such manner that had one of the leaders missed his hold most of the party might have been swept away.

This time they were right, and the leaders were within 60 yards of the first sangar before being perceived. The alarm being given, the interchange of shots at once ceased, and all attention was directed to the daring climbers. Rocks and showers of stones were poured down, but the little band had passed the most exposed points, and only a few were destroyed. Calmly they swung themselves up from rock to rock until at length the plucky subaltern and a few of his men were seen to storm the first sangar, the defendants scattering after a short resistance.—Pall Mall Magazine.

UNLOADING COAL.

Two Ways of Discharging Coal From Canalboats Into Carts.

Scoops like those that are used in taking up mud from under water, in deepening slips, that shut together in the mud, biting out a great mouthful of it to be lifted up and dropped into a scow, are also used in unloading coal—in taking coal out of boats. The ordinary way of unloading coal from boats into carts on the wharf alongside is with big scoops holding a quarter of a ton each, which are hung on pivots so that when they are cast loose they can easily be upset and emptied. These scoops are filled in the boat by men who tip the scoop on its side toward the coal and scrape the coal down into it until it is almost full and then right it up and finish filling it with shovels. The scoop is hooked on to a rope and hoisted up by horse or steam power to the driver waiting with his cart on the wharf, who empties the scoop into his cart. Meanwhile the men below are filling another scoop. The shovellers who do this work earn good wages, but they must be men of strength and endurance, and they may have to work long hours.

The steam scoop is used in only the smaller sizes of coal, but the work that it does is done much cheaper than it could be done by hand shoveling. The scoop is dropped open upon the coal in the hold of a canalboat and then closed by power operated by the engineer who runs it. The separated lower edges of the two parts of the scoop are drawn together down through the coal until they meet, thus holding the coal inclosed.

The scoop is then hoisted up and swung in by power, not over the cart, but over an elevated pocket or bin which has a spout on each side so that two carts can load at once. When it has been swung in, the scoop is opened, to discharge its contents into the pocket, and then it is swung out again and once more dropped open upon the coal in the boat below.—New York Sun.

Electric Lighting in Tunnels.

America is leading the way in the matter of illuminating railway tunnels by means of electricity. The Baltimore tunnel is thus lighted, and arrangements are being made to light the Hoope tunnel in the same way. Similarly, on the continent the great St. Gothard tunnel will shortly be illuminated by means of arc lamps. The advantages claimed for an electrically illuminated railway tunnel are many. Among other things, it will presumably greatly reduce the chances of an accident happening either from collision or through a broken rail or an obstruction, as the engineer will be enabled to see clearly a long way ahead—far enough at least, if the lights are properly distributed, to stop his train in time.—Industries and Iron.

Variations on an Ancient Theme. "My wife," said the tall, lantern jawed man, "is as womanly a woman as you could find, but she can hammer nails like lightning."

"Wonderful," sang the chorus. "Lightning," the tall, lantern jawed man continued, "seldom strikes twice in the same place."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure

Cures a Prominent Attorney.

M. R. C. PHELPS, the leading pension attorney of Belfast, N. Y., writes: "I was discharged from the army on account of ill health, and suffered from heart trouble ever since. I frequently had fainting and smothering spells. My form was bent as a man of 50. I constantly wore an overcoat, even in summer, for fear of taking cold. I could not attend to my business. My rest was broken by severe pains about the heart and left shoulder. Three years ago I commenced using Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, notwithstanding I had used so much patent medicine and taken drugs from doctors for years without being helped. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure restored me to health. It is truly a wonderful medicine and it affords me much pleasure to recommend this remedy to everyone."

Dr. Miles' Remedies are sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee, first bottle benefits or money refunded. Book on diseases of the heart and nerves free. Address, DR. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

Idealism and Realism.

"What do you think, my dear?" exclaimed Mr. Brownjones in tones of joyful excitement. "You know the Federation of Authors is meeting in our city. Well, we are to have the honor of entertaining the celebrated novelist Goldolphin Whatnot as our guest."

"Um," responded Mrs. Brownjones enigmatically. "Is Mr. Whatnot a realist or an idealist?"

"Why do you want to know?" asked Brownjones, surprised.

"Well, if he is an idealist I can just leave things as they are, but if he is a realist I must give the house a thorough cleaning from top to bottom. I may not be literary, but I've dipped into realistic novels, and I know their style: 'The right hand certain hung slightly askew, suggesting that one of the drapery pins had lost its grip. A pendulous cobweb waved mournfully from the cornice just above the door leading into the hall, and there was a fine bloom of dust, like that of the purple grape, on the piano lid. In the left hand corner of the room, almost buried in the pile of somewhat faded carpet, was an invisible hairpin, clearly indicating the recent presence of a woman in the apartment.' Find out right away, Barington, what Mr. Whatnot is, and then I shall know how to proceed. I have no desire to let my house afford material to a realistic observation sharp."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Tears For Revenue Only.

A heterogeneous collection of loafers sat in the village public house, alternately wiping their eyes and sighing heavily. The landlord's son had been buried that day, and a fitting air of gloom pervaded the place.

"What a lot of fuss you make about it!" cried a smart young bravo who had been surveying the company with ill concealed disgust. "Why should we bother ourselves about a corpse?"

The others stared at him aghast, but before they could reply the landlord himself came in and proceeded to serve out quarts of ale in dignified fashion. He went round the room systematically until he came to the smart young man, who held out his hand for the pitcher.

"Nay, lad, that'll get no ale from me," said the landlord.

"Why not?" was the aggrieved question.

"'Cos tha hesn't earn't it like t'rest. They've been blubbing for two hours, an tha hesn't as much as ta'en thy handkerchief out o' thy pocket. My motto today is 'No blub, no ale; so tha's got to go wi'out.'"

Then the young man understood why the grief of the company had been so intense.—London Telegraph.

As to Horseback Riding.

The Kentuckian was talking freely about horses. Although it was a stable he was speaking his mind. He had made the proper speeches about the gait of the beautiful creatures, the trainer trotted up and down, not lost his look of grave as when he heard things about who trots. But a chance word of Kentuckians and westerners, Texans and Californians, in something this wise: "That's right. It ain't really riding to jolt up and down and look stylish on a trotting horse. You can't say much about it in Boston, or anywhere in cities where people don't care about the easy steps. They don't know what you're talking about. It's a queer notion and one my folks in Kentucky can't get used to—that a trotting horse can be a saddle horse. Women want to be stylish, though, everywhere, and they would learn how to rise up like the Boston women. But they didn't keep it up. A steal away and the gallop's the thing for country American riding."—Boston Transcript.

Wisdom Beyond His Years.

His mother found him in the jam and reprimanded him. A little later she caught him teasing his baby sister and reprimanded him again.

"I don't see what's got into you, Willie," she said. "You're usually the good little boy, but today you're up to all kinds of mischief."

"I'm tired of being good," he returned with juvenile frankness.

"Tired of being good?" she exclaimed. "What do you mean by that?"

"Well, brother Bob is naughty most of the time, and you're always giving him things to get him to be good, and I guess I'll be naughty for awhile and see if I don't get something too."

Sometimes a youngster seems to have wisdom beyond his years.—Chicago Post.

Patient Rosy.

Rosy McShane was a fairly good maid of all work, but, like most of her kind, she was woefully slack in caring for her own room.

Her mistress was ill for two or three weeks, and on recovering she went up to Rosy's room and found it in a state of dirt and disorder beyond description.

Very indignant, she called Rosy, and said: "Rosy, I don't see how you can stand it to have your room like this!"

Smiling pleasantly, Rosy made reply: "Ah, thin, ma'am, but I was iver a patient person."—Harper's Bazar.

Not to Be Thought Of.

"Have you selected your topic for a graduation essay?" said the dear girl's mother.

"Yes. It is 'The Injurious Restraints of Superstition, Ancient and Modern.'"

"That's very interesting. You must get right to work on it."

"Oh, dear, no! You wouldn't have me begin it on Friday, would you?"—Washington Star.

"IRONING MADE EASY"

MRS. LAURA WEISHAUF.

Of Murry, Ind., Recommends Wright's Celery Capsules.

Murry, Ind., Sept 17, 1896.

THE WRIGHT MEDICAL CO.,
Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Last spring I purchased a box of Wright's Celery Capsules from L. C. Davenport, druggist, Bluffton, Ind., and used them for stomach trouble with which I had been afflicted for more than 15 years. Since taking your Capsules I have lost all trace of pain and my stomach is entirely well. I can eat anything and can truthfully say that I have not felt better in years.

Yours Respectfully,

MRS. LAURA WEISHAUF.

Sold by W. T. Brooks at 50c. and $1.00 per box. Send address on postal to the Wright Med. Co., Columbus, Ohio, for trial size, free.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with urine and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. When urine stains linen it is evidence of kidney trouble. Too frequent desire to urinate or pain in the back, is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO. There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail, upon receipt of three two-cent stamps to cover cost of postage on the bottle. Mention THE PARIS (Ky) News and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer. (21sp-1mo)
